HEAD OF GEOLOGY IN BEREA COLLEGE LOSES FATHER

Dr. J. B. Burroughs, father of Prof. W. G. Burroughs, head of the Department of Geology, Berea College, passed away on Christmas afternoon. Dr. Burroughs had practiced medicine for thirty years. He made many valuable discoveries in medicine, was the author of several books, and numerous articles. In 1898 he explored in the Klondike, Alaska, and later in Canada and the desert of California. He was a Bible student of note.

Dr. Burroughs is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Greeley Burroughs, and two sons, Prof. W. G. and Prof. W. C. Burroughs.

WHAT IS LATIN GOOD FOR?

By Prof. A. W. Burr

Part I.

That is the question that boys and girls are asking today and teachers too often are failing to answer. A teacher picked up a boy's Latin book and read on the fly leaf:

"Dead are they who spoke it,
Dead are they who wrote it,
Die they must who learn it—
Blessed death they earn it."

Was the boy right? Yes, if his teacher made its study so funeral as that, and some teachers do. They say, "Latin is for mental discipline," and their classes grind out declension, conjugations, vocabularies, and rules, memory tasks, dull work for a live adolescent. He wants to know what it is all for. They say again, "Latin will give you the thought of the great Roman writers, Cicero and Virgil" and they drag their classes, day by day, thru a piece-meal rendering of the Latin into mongrel, translation English. The toiling learners soon mutter "would that they who wrote it" had died far sooner, and they go where thought comes more easily and seems more useful.

There are teachers, forgetting that they are in the twentieth century and not in the fifteenth, who will answer, "The study of Latin will enable you to speak and write as the Romans did." Such make the study a heavy burden by much Latin composition and much marking of Latin quantities. To this the natural reaction of the learner is, "What for?" or "where will I speak and write Latin?" But worse for Latin than what the teacher says is what he does day by day in the classroom. Every teacher that makes the study of Latin a memory drill, or finding an English word for every Latin word, or making a live Roman, is himself living in the traditions of the fifteenth century. That is what is the matter with Latin. It does not, if so taught, meet the needs of the boys and girls of this twentieth century, and it is so taught.

What, then, is High School Latin good for? Latin is first of all to give boys and girls the habit of noticing how things are said, a consciousness of language.

The English language is a system of words and word order for putting ideas across. But the boy and girl have taken their English tongue, as they did their mother's milk, without any thought of it as a means to an end. It has come by unconscious imitation. Language is an instrument whose skillful use is much worthwhile.

Latin is a language system that conveys thought by words that carry both meaning and relation. A letter of a Latin word may be a whole word in English. The Latin word "puer" is literally "boy of," while the English is "of the boy." "Reg-e" is "rule will be" for "he will rule." For "good farmer" the Roman says "farmer good." This contrast in the way of saying opens the eyes of the boy and of the girl to their own speech, or should, if their Latin is rightly taught.

Comparison with something different is one of the best ways of seeing what a thing is. This comparison of the boy's "formless" tongue with the form tongue of the Roman helps him to know how he says things. No modern language can do here what the Latin can do. But to do it there must come such questions as these: "How do you know the case of an English noun?" "Of a Latin noun?" "How do we tell in the Latin to what noun an adjective belongs?" "How in English?" "What makes a verb in the passive voice in English?" "What in Latin?" In such ways the boys and girls begin to see how the wheels go round in their own speech. That is a consciousness of language as the instrument of thought and of speech. There is no better way to it.

But is such consciousness necessary, or worth-while? A boy today picks up some chemistry and some physics, but he studies these sciences if he wishes to know the laws of the composition of bodies or of the res-

MAN'S MORAL CENTER FOUND

English Physician Claims to Have Made Discovery That Apparently Is of Great Importance.

Medical men are debating the recently published conclusions of Dr. William Browning on the subject of the crime center of the human brain.

It was stated by Dr. Browning that although a person has no "bump" for crime, in the same way that he may have a "bump" for music or mathematics, the seat of the moral sense (the sense which helps us to distinguish between right and wrong) is not in one of the glands, as has always been supposed, but in the right frontal lobe of the brain.

Ever since the days of the great Greek physician, Hippocrates, scientists have been trying to discover the location of man's moral center. So far, however, we have had to be content with the knowledge that the structure of the head of the criminal has marked features, such as a low forehead, ears situated below the level of the eyes, and so on.

The importance of the new discovery lies in the fact that it may enable crime to be cured by surgical operations.—London Times.

AND ALWAYS MARKETABLE
Miss Homely: Beauty's but a fading flower.
Youth (with business mind): But a blooming fine asset in the business of love, Miss Homely.

Almost on Roof of World.
The highest known inhabited house in the world is near the summit of Donkila pass, in the north of Sikkim, Tibet. It is a stone hovel, occupied by a Tibetan guard or outpost of four or five men. The height of the pass is 18,100 feet by trigonometrical survey, and 18,400 feet by the aneroid readings. At that height the amount of oxygen in the atmosphere is only half that at sea level. Tibetans can stand this, of course, as their plateau is generally between 15,000 and 16,000 feet. The fact that this hovel is only occupied for a few weeks in the height of the summer rather spoils its record as the highest inhabited house. There is a hovel in the Andes where Peruvian shepherds live all the year round at a height of 17,000 feet.

Subtle Animosity.
"As a friend of our intractable colleague, you ought to persuade him to modify the things that he undertakes to print in the Congressional Record." "But," declared Senator Sorghum, "I'm not at all friendly to him. And for that reason I am in favor of letting him go as far as he likes."

Reforming Influence.
"I don't see anybody in Crimson Gulch carrying weapons. What has caused the reform?" "The automobile," answered Cactus Joe. "We had to make everybody quit carrying guns because we couldn't afford to have so many tires punctured by stray bullets."

No Deception.
"Have you never been deceived by men who pretended to be your friends?" "Very seldom," replied Senator Sorghum. "A false friend is generally a bad actor, and the fact that he feels obliged to dissemble is a tribute to the power of the fellow he's after."

How It Is Done.
"I saw three men lift a great ladle of molten pig-iron," said the man who had just visited the foundry. "After a long process this is made into hair springs for watches."

An Aching Void.
"Mrs. Gadder says her soul is starved."

"What is she going to do about it?" "She has taken up synthetic psychology. If that doesn't give her soul the nourishment it needs I'm afraid her case is hopeless."

The canal will take a ship of 1,500 ton capacity, which is equal to that of many of the vessels that ply on our lakes. Sufficient capital seems to be available for this project, which is the largest ever undertaken in Europe.

In the Waves of Death.
When the waves of death compassed me, the floods of ungodly men made me afraid; the sorrows of hell compassed me about; the snares of death prevented me; in my distress I called upon the Lord, and cried to my God; and He did hear my voice out of His temple.—II Samuel 22:5-7.

Future Destiny—Choose Ye

By REV. B. B. SUTCLIFFE

Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT.—Therefore choose life.—Deut. 30:19.

Who will go to heaven? Where we spend our life on earth is sometimes a matter of our own choosing.

Where we spend eternity is always a matter of our own choosing.

To go to heaven a man must definitely choose to go there. It is a matter of his own deciding. God does all He can to get men there, but He does not force them to go.

He will reason with man about it as He does in Isa. 1:18: "Come now, let us reason together, saith the Lord. Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as wool; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as white as snow."

He will ask: "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"—Heb. 2:3.

He will warn man with the prospect of the rest with Him: "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."—Matt. 11:28.

He will make the great promise found in Rev. 21:4: "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

He will beseech man to be reconciled to Him: "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God."—II Cor. 5:20.

He will instruct: "Ye must be born again."—John 3:16. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Jesus Christ."—Rom. 6:23.

He will declare: "Him that cometh unto Me I will in nowise cast out."—John 6:37.

He will explain: "All we like sheep have gone astray, we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on Him (Christ) the iniquity of us all."—Isa. 53:6. "Who His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree."—I Pet. 2:24.

God does all He can to get men to choose heaven, but He does not and He cannot force them to go there. If any man goes there he goes because he chooses to go. "Therefore choose life."

In the second place, if a man goes to heaven he must not only choose to go but he must choose to go by Christ. There is no other way. This is the testimony of the angels: "He shall save His people from their sins."—Matt. 1:21. It is not some thing, but a Person who alone can save and that Person is Jesus Christ. This is the testimony of His forerunner, John the Baptist: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."—John 3:36.

This is the testimony of the Apostles: Peter says: "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12. Paul says: "The Jews require a sign and the Greeks seek after wisdom; but we preach Christ crucified."—I Cor. 1:22. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."—Acts 16:31. John says: "This is the record that God hath given unto us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. He that hath the Son hath life; he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."—I John 5:11, 12.

This is also the testimony of the Lord Himself: "I am the door; by Me if any man enter in, he shall be saved."—John 10:9. "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by Me."—John 14:6.

In the third place, if a man goes to heaven, he goes because he chooses Christ in this life. A man's destiny is settled at the grave. When the last breath is drawn in this life, his destiny is sealed for all eternity. "It is appointed unto man once to die; and after this the judgment."—Heb. 9:27. The choice is made in this present life and not in some future existence.

In the last place, if a man desires to go to heaven he must not only choose Christ in this life, but he should choose Christ now, today. "Now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."—II Cor. 6:2. A young man once asked an aged preacher when was the best time to accept Christ: his Saviour, and received the reply: "The day before you die." As that day is unknown to any human being and therefore may be any time, today perhaps, the best time for the reader to accept Christ is right now, before you put this paper down. "Behold, I set before you life and death; therefore choose life."
